

Academic Program Review FAQ

What programs are required to participate in program review?

All degree programs are required to participate in the program review process or more specifically, the Campus Review and Evaluation process. This process includes a review, reflection, and possible action(s) on five evaluation criteria from the UNC Policy 400.1 and any other criteria identified by the Chancellor, President or program under review.

Degree programs without specialized accreditations are required to complete an Internal Programmatic Reflection or what was traditionally known as the Self-Study Process. The Internal Programmatic Reflection will coincide with the Campus Review and Evaluation process.

But my program has specialized accreditation, must we still participate in the program review process?

If any of the measures identified in the UNC Policy 400.1 are not required by the specialized accreditor then the college, school, or department must review, reflect, and write an action about the data provided by the Office of Institutional Effectiveness and Analytics.

Must non-accredited academic programs submit their Internal Programmatic Reflections to anyone other than the Provost and Office of Assessment and Accreditation?

No. The non-accredited academic program being reviewed is not required to share the results of its Internal Programmatic Reflection beyond the Provost and Office of Assessment and Accreditation.

Where can I find information about the program review process and timeline?

Academic program review guidelines for programs with and without specialized accreditation can be found on the Office of Assessment and Accreditation website along with other helpful resources.

Where can I find out more information about the academic program review policies?

The UNC System Policy 400.1, Policy on Academic Program Planning and the UNC Charlotte Academic Policy: Academic Program Review both describe the requirements for completing the academic program review process.

If I have questions, who can I contact about the program review process?

For assistance with the academic program review contact:

Steve Coppola

Associate Provost for Institutional Effectiveness and Analytics scoppola@charlotte.edu
704-687-5965